Tribute to the silent mom

On Mother's Day, we pay tribute to all types of moms. The stay-at-home mom, the soccer mom, the classroom volunteer mom, the working mom, etc. This Mother's Day I would like to add to the list, the silent mom.

There may not be a card, because no one will know exactly what to say. Her child will likely be giving someone else a card, while perhaps also wondering about her.

This silent mother made the greatest sacrifice. She took the hard road and placed her child in an adoptive home because she knew it was best for her baby. Her heart still cries out for her offspring, even though she knows her decision was the most loving thing she could have done.

Each year on her child's birthday she remembers and every Mother's Day her heart feels the emptiness for the one whom she hasn't been able to rock to sleep or take to the park. She made a selfless choice to allow another woman to give her child the love and financial support that she could not.

If anyone ever wonders, "how could someone do that?" they simply do not understand the courage and amazing love that it takes to say, "you mean so much to me that I want you to have the very best."

The mothers of Moses and Samuel both knew what it was like to place their children in the care of another. The Bible records little of their heartbreak over their precious ones, but I am certain it was there.

These moms took the harder road, knowing full well that they would feel the suffering of loss. This Mother's Day let's salute these silent moms for whom there may be no cards or gifts. Let's pray for the Lord to fill their emptiness with His unrelenting love and thank Him for the uncommon, sacrificial love they have displayed for their children.

God's rich blessings to you all!
